Savinga vs. National Banks.

Vermont that have so called savings departments. Mr. McClary is a man of strength and prominence in his town Barre, Vt., Dec. 7th, which he has represented once, at least in the Vermant Rouse, serving there as a member of the committee on banking. He is treasurer of the Windsor Savings Bank, an Institution with assets of almost a million dollars. Mr. McClary's standing is such, therefore, that what e save descrives a respectable hearing. The points that he makes equinat sav-ings departments of national hards are: That they afford opertunity for unlimit ed dishousesty and tax dodging massmuch as they make no returns of their de posits to sinte officers.

no state corporation taxes on their de-trust companies organized under state laws to pay the corporation tax, while requiring nothing from national banks that engage in the same line of work.

That specule who deposit with savings banks chare in the profits, while those banks share in the profits, while those who patronize national banks receive a lower rate of interest generally, and the profits go to the banks themselves. That untional bank officials are given wider latitude in making loans to themselves than those of savings banks, and that consequently those who cutrust their savings to the former are taking

That the restrictions as to investments are also liberal to the point of danger in the case of national banks.

And other points Mr. McClary makes with force and directness, Now it is quite possible that the mational banks, many of which in Vermont have savings departments, are in position to make a complete answer; it is
